

Nance L. Schick, Esq., is a counselor at law, business and conflict resolution. Earning her Juris Doctor from the State University of New York at Buffalo and her Bachelor of Science in Sport Administration from the University of Louisville, non-traditional routes to success are her specialty. She advises actors, authors, construction contractors, designers, fitness and yoga instructors, film and stage producers, models, and other small businesses on a variety of operational issues, and she defends employers of all sizes in workers' compensation claims. She has worked as a minor league hockey agent, a small-market model, an adaptive apparel designer, a fitness instructor, a sports marketer, and a professional sports team mascot.

Nance has negotiated minor league player contracts for teams and players, giving her insight regarding the interests of both parties and the negotiable non-monetary compensation. She has helped her clients with branding, business formation, business planning, contracts, marketing, and publicity. She takes their success personally and works tirelessly to help them achieve beyond their expectations.
